Founded (year) 1971

The Aachen University of Applied Sciences (FH Aachen) was established in 1971 as a result of the merger of several universities of applied sciences and vocational training centres. Theory and practice are closely linked up during the entire course of study. The fact that the approximately 230 professors and around 700 staff members involved in teaching and research are directly connected with professional practice guarantees a scientifically sound education providing the relevant professional qualifications. Its more than 12,800 students profit from this. Close cooperation with regional and international enterprises as well as well-known research institutes is reflected in the quality of the curriculum offered. The numerous collaborations with international universities contribute to the quality of the curriculum as well.
